Five Years a Sentinel.

Jacques Roussel, a soldier of the first Smpire, has just died at Montpellier (Hersult), at the age of ninety-one. He was the hero of a singular adventure, of which a number of journals spoke at the time, and which he himself used often to relate. In 1807 the French took possession of Rugen, a small Island in the Baltic, separate from the coast of Pomerania by a narrow channel. It voust's corps, when the order came to evacuate it immediately. The embar-kation was so hasty that a sentinel was forgotten-no other than Roussel. Ignorant of what had passed, he continued to pace up and down, and no relief havspair the departure of the detachment, "Mon Dieu!" he exclaimed, "I shall be reported as a deserter. Remarkable Effects of Arctic Cold on Man.

Lieutenant Payer, the Austrian Arctic explorer, has been laying some of the results of his explorations before the Geographical Society of Vienna. Refer-ring to the influence of extreme cold on the human organism, he related that on March 14, 1874, he and his companions made a sledge journey over the Semi-klar glacier, in order to make *bservations of Francis Joseph land. On that day the cold marked 58 deg. Fah, below zero. Notwithstanding this intense cold, M. Payer and a Tyrolese went out before sunrise to make observations and

The sunrise was magnificent; the sun appeared surrounded, as it does at a high degree of cold, by small suns, and its light appeared more dazzling from the contrast with the extreme cold.

The travelers were obliged to pour rum down their throats so as not to touch the edge of the metal cups, which would have been as dangerous as if they had been red hot; but the rum had lost all its strength and liquidity, and was as flat and thick as oil.

It was impossible to smoke either cigars or tobacco in short pipes, for very soon nothing but a piece of ice remained in the mouth.

The metal of the instruments was just like red-hot iron to the touch, as were some lockets, which some of the travelers, romantically but imprudently, continued to wear next the skin.

M. Payer says that so great an amount of cold paralyzes the will, and that, un-der its influence, men, from the unsteadiness of their gait, their stammering talk, and the slowness of their mental operations, seem as if they were intoxi-

Another effect of cold is a tormenting thirst, which is due to the evaporation of the moisture of the body.

It is unwholesome to use anew to quench the thirst; it brings on inflammation of the throat, palate and tongue Besides, enough can never be taken to quench the thirst, as a temperature of 35½ deg. to 58 deg. below zero Fah. makes it taste like molten metal. Snow caters in the north are considered as feeble and effeminate, in the same way as is an opium enter in the east.

The group of travelers who traversed the snow fields were surrounded by These vapors fell to the ground, with a alight noise, frozen into the form o small crystals, and rendered the atmos phere thick, impenetrable and dark.

Notwithstanding the humidity of the air, a disagreeable sensation of dryness Sound diffused itself to a very long dis tance, an ordinary conversation could be heard at a hundred paces off, while the report of guns from the tops of high ountains could scarcely be heard. Payer explains this phenomenon by the large quantity of moisture in the arctic atmosphere. Meat could be chopped, and mercury used in the shape of balls.

Both smell and taste become greatly enfeebled in these latitudes; strength gives way under the paralyzing influence of the cold; the eyes involuntarily close and become frozen.

When locomotion stops the sole of the foot becomes insensible. It is somewhat curious that the beard does not freeze; but this is explained from the air expired, falling, being immediately transformed into snow. cold causes dark beards to become lighter; the secretions of the eyes and nose always increases, while the formation of the perspiration altogether ceases The only possible protection against the cold is to be very warmly clothed and to endeavor as much as possible to prevent the condensation of the atmosphere, while the much vaunted plans of annointing and blackening the body are pronounced to have no real value.

French Coquetry.

As to the woman of France, her co uetry is proverbial. It is the oil in the salad. A Spanish proverb is that a kiss without a mustache is like an egg without salt: and the Frenchman avers that a woman without a certain degree of coquetry is like a saltless soup.

The woman of rigid principles and adamantine virtue is everywhere held up for popular admiration, and men say they admire her; and they do in a luke warm fashion that is equivalent to the faint praise which damns. They give an intellectual assent to her claims for superiority, and secretly vote her tame. But for those whose character is flavore with a trifle of coquetry they stand ready to commit those acts of folly which are known to be so pleasing to the gentle a virtue, and the mother of cleanliness grace, adornment, and the desire to please. When it is found in bad company, such as frivolity, dissipation, ex-travagance, and the like, it may be presumed that there is too much salt in the soup. - Albert Rhodes.
